

Good Deeds, Indeed

Have do-gooders Brad and Angelina inspired you to be a socially responsible traveler? With these ecotourism programs, you can give back to the region—and enjoy a plush honeymoon abroad.

At the 196-room Four Seasons Resort Nevis, West Indies, you can adopt an endangered sea turtle for $25. Proceeds will benefit the Caribbean Conservation Corporation, a non-profit group dedicated to studying and saving these marine creatures. “Your” turtle will be tagged with a satellite transmitter and can then be tracked online at ccturtle.org (doubles from $475 per night; fourseasons.com/nevis).

Elevate Destinations, a company specializing in international travel, will donate five percent of the cost of your trip to a charity that’s local to your destination. Opt for the 13-day trip to Kenya and you’ll stay in a luxurious tree-house-style hotel, take a hot-air balloon ride and do plenty of wildlife viewing. The best part: You’ll be supporting the Gallmann Africa Conservancy (packages from $8,000 per person; elevatedestinations.com).
